

Randall Probst Takes Pride in His Work

When employee evaluations began last summer at Wasatch County Hospital, something out of the ordinary occurred - something which doesn't normally happen anywhere else - but did indeed happen here. In the middle of one calm night, when most people were secure at home sleeping - except for the night staff at Wasatch County Hospital - Randall Probst walked down the quiet hallway to his office to talk to his nurses about their performance at their convenience and not at his.

"He cares so much about his nurses," said Michele Ludlow, assistant director of nursing. He bends over backwards to help his nurses all the time."

Randall Probst was born and raised in Heber Valley where he attended school in Midway. At school, he enjoyed playing sports such as basketball, football, track and others.

Upon graduation from high school, he decided to continue his education at Utah State University (USU). After a few months of college, he was called to serve a mission for the LDS Church in the Illinois area.

After his mission, he married the former DeAnna Morgeneegg from Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Probst decided to continue his education and transferred his schooling to the nursing school at BYU. He graduated as a registered nurse and later received his bachelor's degree in business from the University of Phoenix. Presently, he is working on his MBA from the extension service of the University of Phoenix.

Probst began his career at Fillmore Hospital where he advanced to assistant administrator and director of nursing. After seven years at Fillmore, he moved his residence back to Heber City.

According to his wife, DeAnna, Randall enjoys working with people and is easily liked by people.

"Randall is a good listener and people tend to gravitate to him because he knows how to help without offending them," DeAnna said. "He simply enjoys doing that extra mile in order to help people."

According to hospital administrators, Wayne T. Terry, Randall has skills which are not often found.

"With his background, Randall understands the needs and functions of this hospital in both the medical and business aspects," Terry said. "He possesses keen insight and foresight for the needs of our employees and moreover, for the patients we serve."

"When I have to leave town for meetings," Terry said, "I feel very comfortable that there is someone here, like Randall who can take charge of the hospital in my absence."

Terry also said that Randall is concerned with the quality of health care at the hospital and is particularly interested in health care for the elderly.

"Randall is always thinking of ways to advance the quality of health care in our hospital," Terry said. "I am sure there are many people grateful for his interest and efforts in this area of quality long-term health care."

According to Ludlow, Randall is the most perfect role model for her and for the nursing staff.

"He is the most hardworking person I have ever seen," she said. "He really cares a lot about the hospital and will spend hours to ensure that patients receive the very best care possible."

Ludlow also said Randall is very levelheaded and will never allow issues to upset him.

"I know that no matter what happens in the hospital, he will always respond in his usual calm and understanding way," Ludlow said.

Ludlow said that Randall always does his homework and will study issues at hand before he makes a decision.

According to Terry, Randall is very resourceful and as a result, he has served on various committees and task forces in both the hospital and with Intermountain Health Care (IHC).

He is the father of six children and is presently in an LDS bishopric.

"Randall is a good leader, a good example, and a great privilege for us at the hospital to work with him."
